

I am distressed to learn that a media giant, Sinclair Broadcasting, is forcing their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. This is a clear use of the public airwaves for partisan political purposes. Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest.

Sinclair's action demonstrate why we need greater diversity of media ownership and why corporate giants should be limited in the number of media outlets they own.